I like the clean, minimalist look of this website which I think would inspire people to want to make these recipes because of the great images.

The recipes page continues the clean look and uses whitespace well while presenting a lot of information to the user.

I also like the fonts used throughout the website.

I actually use this website for recipes all the time but I don't love how busy it is. The images are great and I understand that she wants to show images of new recipes to click but I prefer the more minimalist approach to Love & Lemons' home page. The recipe page is pretty good except for the ads that take up the white space and make it feel more cluttered.

This is similar to the Love & Lemons website, clean and minimal. I prefer the L&L site not having a sidebar on the home page but I think it works for this site.
